Entrepreneurship Skills For Startup

Course Description:

An entrepreneur is a person who creates such product or service which had no existence in the past or no one thought about it before. Though sometimes it is conceived starting again old business with new techniques or strategies, actually enterprise denotes new product or service. In this case, the entrepreneur has to decide for himself how to start the business, how to run it, and what the future plans are. To be an entrepreneur, you need to think a little differently from ordinary people. Occasionally, you have to think outside the box. On top of these, many more traits exist in an entrepreneur that set him apart from ordinary people. However, there are many of us who think that entrepreneurship means business. There is no difference between the two. In fact, the matter is completely different. There are many differences between a businessman and an entrepreneur. A merchant sells a product or service. But an entrepreneur invents that product or service. In this case, all entrepreneurs are businessmen but not all businessmen are entrepreneurs. An entrepreneur becomes an entrepreneur only if the product he is selling is invented by himself.
